

PROFILE OF ERNESTO MARZANO

Ernesto Marzano is a transport economist and planner.

He has been involved worldwide in consultancy for infrastructure and transport projects.

He is a specialist in:

- technical analysis and assessment of infrastructure projects
- urban development
- feasibility analysis of projects

From 1998 to 2001 he was Managing Director (founder and shareholder) of C&A S.r.L, a company specialised in projects in Developing Countries. He is a founder and partner of WODA (World Diversity Associates).

He has engineering and economic experience in the organisation, management, planning, maintenance, rehabilitation of urban and rural transportation systems, and in the financial and socio-economic assessment of the impacts. Specific modal expertise includes roads, railways, public transit, ports, civil aviation and urban traffic management. His experience has encompassed projects in Africa, Asia, Caribbean, Europe, Central and Latin America and the Middle East for government clients and for international funding agencies; many involving the preparation of technical reports. In recent years, Mr. Marzano has increasingly assumed more responsibility for projects progressing from Project Manager to positions of corporate responsibility for a number of major transportation projects, including monitoring of overall progress, ex-post evaluation and assessment for quality assurance, and for business development activities.
